The Creative Process

Anna Bond is co-founder and chief creative officer at Rifle Paper Co. and her hand-painted illustrations and distinctive color palette are the heart of the Winter Park, Florida based brand. All of Anna's designs begin with gouache paintings that are then manipulated and re-imagined to become vibrant patterns filled with figures and florals that feel both modern and timeless.

Anna painted the bright blooms and sweet berries of our Strawberry Fields collection as individual elements, and then layered them together to create a lush pattern of trailing vines and florals.

Design & Manufacturing

The York Wallcoverings design studio's innovative styling marries each design to the perfect technologies. With every type of wallpaper printing press available in house at York, design interpretation through screen, gravure, rotogravure, surface, embossed vinyl, and digital presses become a canvas for self-expression. This essential hands-on creativity pervades the York manufacturing process, bringing each artistic vision to print reality.

York manufactures all wallcovering product types, including residential, commercial grade, high performance, acoustical, and peel and stick. Here, York's combined technologies, handcrafting, and authentic surface print techniques create a manufacturing mastery of heritage and innovation. Our design studio, manufacturing process, and distinguished heritage make York the preeminent provider of fine wallcoverings in the interior design industry.

Surface Print

Surface Print is the oldest automated printing method still in use today which utilizes raised images on an engraved roller to transfer colors to a continuous reel of paper. A heavy lay-down of inks, wet-on-wet printing, and a less exact image outline give this type of printing a very distinct look that is impossible to duplicate with modern presses.

Look for this logo throughout the catalog to find Surface Print Designs.

Poppy
Blue Wood Aster & Poppy

ICELAND POPPY

TYPE Biennial or herbaceous perennial
 FAMILY Papaveraceae (Pap-av-ee-ay-see-ee)
 GENUS Papaver (Pap-pay-ver)
 SPECIES nudicaule (now-dik-kaw-lee)

• The Iceland Poppy is one of the loveliest of the genus, but, as it is a native of arctic regions, it is generally only satisfactory all summer in regions where the summers are cool.

USES Plant it in colonies in the front of the mixed border or in the rock garden. The flowers can be used for flower arrangements if cut early in the morning.

HABIT OF GROWTH Low tufts or rosettes of hairy foliage with naked 1-foot flower stems.

FLOWERS Fragrant single or double flowers with crinkled petals and satiny texture, about 3 inches across. Bloom in spring and on through summer where conditions are cool. Colors are white, orange, pink, red, and various pastel tints.

ASSETS Dainty flowers in clear soft colors; long-blooming in cold climates. Can easily be raised from seeds.

FAULTS Plants do not travel well, so it is difficult to establish

when they have to be brought from a distance; inability to endure hot, humid weather.

CULTURE Although in their native arctic regions Iceland Poppies are true perennials, they seem to do best when handled as biennials in most sections of this country. Seed can be sown in August and the young plants will winter over with no difficulty, producing their best blooms that spring. Some plants may continue to flower all summer, but generally they degenerate at the approach of warm weather. They need full sun and a light, well-drained soil. Space the plants about 1 foot apart.

RECOMMENDED VARIETIES There are several strains now available, including CANTON GIANTS, large flowers in all colors; IMPERIAL JEWELS, frilled and fluted petals; RED CARDINAL, a bright red; SUTTON'S PINK SHADES, SUTTON'S LEMON YELLOW, and SUTTON'S AERARANA SCARLET.
